Turning the plant (right handed) – North Holland

Employment at least 26 weeks

Description

To ensure that we can harvest many tomatoes, the plants are neatly hung next to each other in the greenhouse. The plant does not automatically grow around the string, but this string is twisted around the plant. This happens every week as the plant grows further. The plant makes new shoots, which remove energy from the main plant. By removing these shoots, the thieves, the main plant gets the energy it needs for making tomatoes.

You are also willing to carry out other horticultural activities if necessary.
